

THE VALDER BEEBE SHOW GOES GREEN

Living Green is to inspire YOU to live a more planet-friendly lifestyle.

BlackMenInAmerica.com has partnered with The Valder Beebe Show to help us learn more about "living green" states Gary Johnson, founder of BlackMenInAmerica.com.

We warmly invite you to join us on our journey of discovery in learning about living a more environmentally friendly life; and I hope you'll also teach us along the way. Going green doesn't mean sacrifices and big costs. In fact, it can save you money. Going green does not mean more sacrifices; it means "changing the way you look at things – so that the thing you look at will change," according to Valder Beebe, founder and author of Living Green and host of The Valder Beebe Show (ValderBeebeShow.com).

What does living green mean to you? It's not about preaching to consumers; it is about Living Green and going green to leave the earth a better planet for our children, grandchildren and generations to come. It's about making a difference in using the earth's resources wisely; giving back; recycling, reusing and re-purposing items that we need to sustain us. To sum it up, living green means to "leave as small a footprint of damage as possible." Beebe's Living Green is dedicated to providing solutions, information and how-to's for "recycle, reuse, renew and Live Green" for YOU and the planet.

ONE IN A MILLION

Dallas entrepreneur couple James and Valder Beebe were inducted into the 2007 National and Texas Black Marriage Hall of Fame by The Alliance for North Texas Healthy Effective Marriages (ANTHEM) coalition and The Marriage Day Marriage Hall of Fame.

James & Valder Beebe

James and Valder began their courtship with a sweep-you-off-your-feet romance here in Dallas.

“When we first met, James had been visiting his brother but he had to return to Lansing, Michigan, after our two glorious weeks together,” said Valder.

Valder recalls how James continued to think about her after returning home.

At home James called daily, playing piano and singing to Valder in his Larry Graham voice. The turning point came quickly. After a few weeks of his calls and her letters, he phoned and sang Stevie Wonder’s “I Just Called to Say I Love You.” Then he confessed, “I can’t live without you.”

And he meant it. Today, their love still burns strong. James and Valder have been married 23 years and have four children, and are still enjoying an incredible love affair and friendship.

As the authors of the E-Inspirations Book, “20 Inspirations for an Inspiring Marriage” currently available on www.valderbeebeshow.com, the two lovebirds have extended their “happiness ratio” with this downloadable inspirations book. The Beebe’s state “we want everyone who desire to have a chance for love to experience the joy that we have through our love-affair.”

James and Valder Beebe are profiled in the February 2008 issue of the Dallas, Texas publication, Epitome Magazine (epitomemagazine.org) as the magazine role model couple. And to all of the other couples out there, keep God first.
